

Most Washington drivers agree: Cannabis and driving don't mix

Get The Details

Most of us never drive high

Sober driving is a core value in Washington

Driving high causes crashes

Crashes involving cannabis have been increasing

Cannabis diminishes driving ability

Including focus and reacting to hazards

Plan ahead

If you use cannabis, have a strategy that omits driving

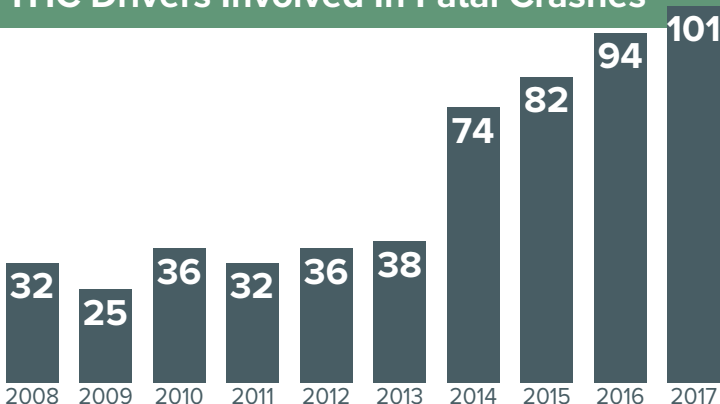

Watch for each other

If someone is impaired and wants to drive, take action

TARGET ZERO

Most Washington adults (83%) believe that it is unacceptable to drive within two hours of consuming cannabis.

THC Drivers Involved In Fatal Crashes

The effects of cannabis on driving:

- Impairs small motor skills
- Impairs judgement
- Slows reaction time

No matter what anyone tells you, no one drives better (or even the same) when high.

Make a plan before you go out:

Call a taxi or ridesharing service

Have a sober friend pick you up

Use public transportation

Plan ahead to stay over

Leave your car at home

Take Action: Most of us (80%) in a position to intervene take action to prevent impaired driving.

More information at:

wadrivetozero.com

feeldifferentdrivedifferent.org

targetzero.com

TARGET ZERO