

Stop, Look, and Listen

Buckle Up

Wear a Helmet

5

Cross Streets
at Crosswalks

TRAFFIC SAFETY
SKILLS
KIDS SHOULD KNOW

Walk on the Sidewalk

PARENTS!

You play a vital role in teaching your child traffic safety skills. Please take a moment to review the five traffic safety skills below, and consider how you can teach and demonstrate these skills to your child. (And coloring isn't just for kids - this side is for you.)

Buckle up: In addition to buckling your child or, if they're old enough to do it themselves, confirming that they're buckled, you can set an example by letting them know you're buckled up too.

Wear a helmet: If your child doesn't have a helmet yet, you can choose one together and adjust it for proper fit. Then, you can make putting it on a part of every ride (for your child and you too.)

Walk on the sidewalk: When you're walking with your child, you can point out how the sidewalk keeps walkers separate from cars. Help your child choose routes that have sidewalks.

Stop, look, and listen: Before you cross the street, you can ask your child to stop and tell you if they see or hear any vehicles approaching.

Cross at crosswalks: When it's time to cross the street, you can ask your child to spot the nearest crosswalk. Set an example by always choosing to cross at a crosswalk with your child.